Christmas in the trenches

My name is Francis Tolliver, I come from Liverpool.
Two years ago the war was waiting for me after school.
To Belgium and to Flanders, to Germany to here,
I fought for King and country I love dear.
It was Christmas in the trenches where the frost so bitter hung.
The frozen field of France were still, no Christmas song was sung.
Our families back in England were toasting us that day,
their brave and glorious lads so far away.

I was lying with my mess-mates on the cold and rocky ground when across the lines of battle came a most peculiar sound.
Says I "Now listen up me boys", each soldier strained to hear as one young German voice sang out so clear.
"He's singing bloody well you know", my partner says to me.
Soon one by one each German voice joined in in harmony.
The cannons rested silent, the gas cloud rolled no more as Christmas brought us respite from the war.

As soon as they were finished and a reverent pause was spent,
'God rest ye merry, gentlemen' struck up some lads from Kent.
The next they sang was 'Stille Nacht'. "Tis 'Silent Night" says I and in two tongues one song filled up that sky.
"There's someone coming towards us" the front-line sentry cried.
All sights were fixed on one lone figure trudging from their side.
His truce flag, like a Christmas star, shone on that plain so bright as he bravely strode, unarmed, into the night.

Then one by one on either side walked into no-mans-land;
with neither gun nor bayonet we met there hand to hand.
We shared some secret brandy and we wished each other well and in a flare-lit soccer game we gave 'em hell.
We traded chocolates, cigarettes and photographs from home, these sons and fathers far away from families of their own.
Young Sanders played his squeeze box and they had a violin this curious and unlikely band of men.

Soon daylight stole upon us and France was France once more.
With sad farewells we each began to settle back to war.
But the question haunted every heart that lived that wondrous night
"Whose family have I fixed within my sights?"
It was Christmas in the trenches where the frost so bitter hung.
The frozen fields of France were warmed as songs of peace were sung.
For the walls they'd kept between us to exact the work of war had crumbled and were gone for evermore.

My name is Francis Tolliver. In Liverpool I dwell.
Each Christmas come since World War One I've learned its lessons well:
that the ones who call the shots won't be among the dead and lame and on each end of the rifle we're the same.

John McCutcheon
Christmas in the trenches

My name is Francis Tolliver, I come from Liverpool; two years ago the war was waiting for me after school. To Belgium and to Flanders, to Germany to here, I fought for King and country I love dear.

'Twas Christmas in the trenches where the frost so bitter hung, the frozen fields of France were still, no Christmas songs were sung. Our families back in England were toasting us that day, their

I was lying with my messmate on the cold and rocky ground. When a brave and glorious lad so far a-way, cross the lines of battle came a most peculiar sound. Says I 'Now listen up me boys', each

Copyright © Appalseed Music
S. A.

soldier strained to hear as one young German voice sang out so clear.

T. B.

As one by one each German voice joined in harmony the cannons rested silent. The partner says to me.

S. A.

gas clouds rolled no more, as Christmas brought us respite from the war. As soon as they were finished and a

T. B.

reverent pause was spent, God rest you merry gentlemen, struck up some lads from Kent. The next they sang 'Stille Nacht' and in two tongues one song filled up that sky. 'Tis Silent night says I and in two tongues one song filled up that sky. There's some one coming towards us, the frontline sentry cried. All sights were fixed on one lone figure.

S. A.

T. B.

His trace flag like a Christmas star shone on that plain so bright, as he traded from their side.

bravely strode un-armed into the night. Soon one by one either side walked into No man's Land. With neither gun nor bayonet, we met there hand to hand. We shared some secret brandy and we wished each other well, and in a flare-lit soccer match we gave 'em hell.

traded 'em lights, cigarettes and photographs from home, these sons and fathers far away from families of their own.

Young Sanders played his squeeze-box and they had a violin, this Soon day-light stole up on us and France was France once more. With curious and un-like-ly band of men.

sad fare-wells we each began to set-tle back to war.

But the quest-ion haun-ted ev-ry heart that beat that won-drous night. Whose fam’ly have I fixed with-in my sights? 'Twas Christ-mas in the tren-ches where the frost so bit-ter hung. The fro-zen fields of France were warm-ed as songs of peace were sung.

wells they'd kept be-tween us to ex-act the work of war had been crum-bled and were gone for e-ver more.
name is Francis Tol-ly-ver, in Liverpool I dwell. Each Christmas come since World War One I've learned his lesson well. That the ones who call the shots won't be a-among the dead and lame, and on each end of the rifle, we're the same.